The Clever Little Sparrow

Once upon a time in a small forest, there lived a clever little sparrow named Chirpy. Chirpy loved exploring the woods and observing all the animals. One day, while hopping near a river, she saw a big, thirsty crow struggling to reach the water at the bottom of a narrow pitcher.

Chirpy flew closer and asked, "What's the matter, Mr. Crow?"

"I'm thirsty, but I can't reach the water in this pitcher," the crow replied, looking frustrated.

Chirpy thought for a moment and then said, "Don't worry! I'll help you." She looked around and saw some small pebbles nearby. Chirpy picked up a pebble with her tiny beak and dropped it into the pitcher. Then she picked another pebble and dropped it in.

The crow watched curiously. Slowly, as more pebbles went into the pitcher, the water level began to rise. Soon, the crow could reach the water and drank happily.

"Thank you, Chirpy," said the crow, smiling. "Your clever idea saved me!"

Chirpy replied, "We all need to help each other when we can. That's what friends are for!"

From that day on, Chirpy and the crow became good friends, always ready to help one another.
